

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A balanced hybrid circuit for compensating for transmission echo signal in a modem. The hybrid circuit includes transmission echo compensation circuits that approximate the echo signal effects of the line and line transformer, respectively, and produce a transmission echo signal replica. A sample of the transmission signal and the replica of the transmission echo are then subtracted from the signal received on the line to produce a received signal isolated from the transmission signal and the transmission echo signal.